The Mysterious Mouse

Once there was mouse. Not just any mouse, it was a mysterious mouse. He loved cheese, just like any other mouse. But he didn't like a lot of cheese. He usually liked a nibble of cheese, well.... To a human that is. The mouse liked humans but his friends did not. When he said the word "human", they all ran and screamed. "Hey guys!" His friends backed away because they thought he would talk about humans again. Finally one day it was Christmas and the mouse met a new human in town and he decided to live with her forever. The first day was amazing for the mouse! He loved her and she loved him from the start.

The mouse soon figured out the girl was a princess. "Hello little mouse" the girl said. "Having a nice day?" She wondered where he was from. She couldn't really communicate with him but she could tell just what he wanted. Soon the mouse and the princess had to be parted. The mouse always ran through the kitchen and always frightened the chef, so one day the chef caught the little mouse and threw him outside. So the mouse ran away the princess had always thought about him and he always thought about her.

One day the mouse figured out how to get back into the castle. He did it by going through a hole that was always outside of the castle. That's how most mice got in and out. Soon he found himself in the princess's room. She was just about to put on her crown when the mouse ran and jumped onto her dresser. She was frightened for a moment but then she noticed him, so she said, "Hello little mouse" like she had once said a while ago. Now, the mouse and the princess were both happy again and they both lived happily ever after.
