

One day a lonely dog was walking along the very busy road. The dog was a stray. He was a black and tan German Shepherd-Rottweiler mix. Meanwhile, a small, fluffy, yellow Pomeranian – Chihuahua mix dragged her tall woman owner onto the road. “Stop it Clipper,” yelled the tall woman. The dog only yapped louder. That is what small dogs do. The bigger dog barked and barked fiercely. The tall woman quickly let go of the leash because she didn’t want to get run over by a car. She thought the road wasn’t as busy as it looked and that Clipper would make it to the sidewalk. Suddenly Clipper was in the middle of the busy street. The big dog grabbed Clipper by the scruff of her neck. He dropped her on the other side of the road but he was still partly in the road himself. The bigger dog tried to follow Clipper but he got run over by a fast blue car that was speeding down the street. The stray dog limped slowly to the other side of the road so that another car would not hit him again. The tall woman was a little scared when she ran over to scoop up Clipper. Clipper was still yapping. Then she took the bigger stray dog to the vet. It ended up that he was okay. The woman ended up adopting the bigger dog. She named him Hero Dog because he had saved her Clipper. The End.
