

The Wizard and the Horn

Once upon a time, there was a boy who went to a library. His name was Zack. Zack read a book called The Legend of the Unicorn's Horn. In that book it said that the horn's power could do anything, but there were so many dangers that protected the horn, no regular man could capture it and get out alive. Zack went out into the world to try and learn how to be a wizard, so that he could capture the horn.

As Zack grew, he learned how to become a wizard. When he had learned all he could, he went out searching for the unicorn's horn. Wizard Zack went to the forest of Delphi, where the book said the horn might be. The trees in the forest of Delphi were alive and could move. When they saw the wizard, they tried to catch him. Wizard Zack was too powerful for them. He used a spell to make sure they couldn't touch him. So, the trees told a hero who was a master archer named Timothy, to try and catch the wizard.

The hero, Timothy, went out looking for Wizard Zack. Timothy searched where the trees said Zack was going, to the center of the forest. Close to the center of the forest, Timothy found the wizard. Wizard Zack started to run. The wizard cast a spell to make himself fast. He was too fast for Timothy, so the hero whistled. Then, a dragon came out of nowhere and Timothy jumped on his back and chased after the wizard. What Timothy didn't know was that Wizard Zack was running right toward the center of the forest, where the unicorn's horn was.

The dragon and Timothy caught up to Wizard Zack. The dragon, who was magical, changed him into another dragon. Now, that dragon, who used to be the wizard, guards the unicorn's horn.

The End

Matthew Green
age 8
P18-408-1212
March 2004

